H. W. Cozad and Katherine Maher Wedded Early Today

A wedding that united in marriage two young people well known in the city social circles was solemnized this morning at St. Joseph's Catholic church when Miss Katherine B. Maher, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Maher, 623 Eighteenth street, became the bride of Harry W. Cozad. Nuptial mass was said at 8 o'clock by Dean J. J. Quinn, the church being well filled with friends of the young people. Miss Katherine Kurth at the organ and Mrs. Victor Frykman, violin, played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin as the members of the wedding party took their places before the altar. Harry Larkin, Dr. Victor A. Bergland, Dr. Ben Sherrard and Herbert Hunt, the ushers, led the procession, the bridesmaid, Miss Katherine Walsh of Davenport, and the groom's best man, Roy Collins, came next, followed by the bride and groom. During the ceremony Miss Kurth and Mrs. Frykman played Liebestraum by Liszt and Mrs. B. J. Lachner, with organ and violin accompaniment, sang "Ave Maria" and two nuptial songs, Mendelssohn's wedding march being played as the recessional. The altar of the church was simply decorated with palms, ferns and Easter lilies. The bride wore a beautiful gown of chantilly lace with draped bodice, with a court train of white satin. Her tulle veil was held at the hair with a cap of real lace, and fell to the hem of her gown where it was formed into a big spreading bow. She carried a white prayer book from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid was dressed in a lovely gown of pleated tulle with a tunic of mechlin with bows of pink satin ribbon. Her head dress was of pleated tulle and she carried an arm bouquet of American beauty roses. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast served at the home of the bride, relatives and a small company of friends being the guests. Here baskets of white daisies and pink sweet peas were used with beautiful effect throughout the rooms and on the tables.

Mr. and Mrs. Cozad left during the day for Sherwood Forest, Green Lake, Wis., for a month's visit and after Nov. 1 will be at home in this city. The bride wore as her traveling costume a suit of royal blue charmeuse with a white satin hat.

Mr. Cozad is in the insurance business being associated with the H. H. Cleveland agency as city agent. His bride is a graduate of the local high school and completed her college course at St. Mary's school, Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind. She is an artist of much ability and enjoys as does Mr. Cozad, a wide acquaintance in the three cities. Guests from out of the city were the groom's mother, of Reynolds, Walter Miller of Chicago and George Brown of Geneseo.

ROQUET-TREGO.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Trego, near Sherrard, Wednesday at noon took place the marriage of Miss Olive M. Trego to Emil Roquet of Matherville, a wedding company of 60 relatives and near friends witnessing the ceremony. The service was read by Rev. A. K. Johnson of the Lutheran church of Sherrard. Miss Frances Schurr at the piano played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin at the ceremony hour and during the service played "Hearts and Flowers." The bride was attended by Miss Lulu Trego, her sister, and Miss Bernice Bopp, her cousin, and Joe Trego and George Roquet were the groom's attendants. The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with green net and silver beads. She wore the full length veil held with rosebuds and she carried bride's roses. Miss Trego wore pink messaline trimmed with pearls, and Miss Bopp was in pink crepe trimmed in shadow lace, both young women carrying arm bouquets of pink carnations. A wedding dinner was served on the lawn after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Roquet went for a trip to Chicago and other places in the state, and after Aug. 1 will be at home in Matherville, where the groom is in business. His bride has been a teacher in the Sherrard and Matherville schools.

Walker gave a talk on the subject of delinquent boys and the school for them at Gary, Ind.; R. W. Sharp spoke on the subject of water and the manner of handling it, and O. E. McLaughlin of Moline talked along general lines. Robert Cowley pleased with a number of readings, and a quartet composed of Messrs. Roberts, Earl and W. E. Freeland and Hoffman sang. ### STARK-BENSON.

The Morning Register of Eugene, Ore., dated Sunday, June 20, gives the following account of the marriage of Miss Cora Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Benson of Moline, to John Stark of Eugene, which took place Saturday morning, June 19. A stunning picture of the Moline bride also appears in the same issue: "A pretty June wedding was solemnized yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at the residence of J. M. Stark at 543 Fifth avenue west, when John Stark was married to Miss Cora Benson of Moline, Ill. The Rev. J. R. N. Bell of Corvallis performed the ceremony. Only the relatives and immediate friends were present. Pink and white flowers formed an artistic color scheme, amidst which the bride, attired in a traveling costume of green silk with black picture band, made a charming sight. The groom is a popular employee of the firm of McMorran & Washburne. They left immediately after the ceremony for Newport, where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will be at home at the Working flats, 614 Lawrence street."

A bevy of young women were entertained yesterday by Miss Marian McCabe at her home, 2920 Fifth avenue, at an informal party at the club. Miss Suckow tells a story as if she had really lived it and was telling it from her own experience. Games of various kinds were played, victrola music enjoyed, and later the rugs were turned back and the young women danced. They were served with delightful refreshments and each guest was given a lovely rose as a favor. Vases of roses

Making Marriage Difficult

BY MARY AQUIN.

It takes two to make a marriage, but only one to make a divorce. In the vast number marching to and from the courts the actions for divorce are usually the result of persistent effort on the part of one malcontent; paradoxically, it is the resistant party that is finally forced to dissolve the union. The court records reveal a large majority of applicants for a sundering of bonds to be women. It should not be construed as indicating that more women than men become dissatisfied with the marriage relation. Through woman's dependency upon him for support, any man may make conditions such that his silent partner is forced into bankruptcy. When it is rumored that Mrs. Heavyheart is applying for divorce the assumption may be entirely wrong that she really wants one. There is a sort of "noblesse oblige" in divorce etiquette which leaves to the one bringing action whatever scanty honors there may be. Woman, as the weaker vessel, is magnanimously accorded this courtesy by the eager individual who by conduct or design has engineered the sinking of the good ship, Matrimony.

Many things contribute to a final dissolution of vows, and seemingly all thoughts of the vital experiences held in common are cast aside in the delirium which has driven one or both to the divorce court. Husband and wife who have sat breathless through an endless night, gazing at each other in dumb despair, while their little child lay sick unto death; who have mutually comforted one another through the griefs and calamities that come like frequent storm into every life; who have lived in the rainbow happiness that limits the world as of old to an Eden of two. Surely it must be an unnatural or shallow condition of mind that brings them to crumple the best pages of their lives and cast them aside in divorce.

A few days ago the newspapers carried the intimation that a well known society woman of New York and Newport, who had been saved along with her husband and their two children from a watery grave with the Titanic, had been secretly divorced and might remarry. Without knowing the merits of the case it is unjust to criticize. Antecedent behavior of her husband may have caused this woman to foolishly bruise her butterfly wings. Yet, had she been trained to regard duty as love, which is the chrysalis stage in the evolution of marriage, she must have thought long and seriously before divorcing her children as well. For the real sufferers are the children who lose the combined care of their parents.

Two suns arise in the sky of a child's heaven. When one is obscured it is never quite the same bright fairyland; the child cannot understand why, only feels, that the earth is less warm; a heart-hungry little wanderer from love. For such reason marriage should be made difficult.

"Individual liberty," with which Americans, particularly, presage political, moral and all other argument should have a tight cord wound around it and strangled once and for all. No man lives unto himself and, obviously, this is true of marriage wherein several may become auxiliary. The offspring is all that should be considered in attempting a solution of the divorce problem, for it is doubtful that marriage is true marriage until it is sanctified by the presence of children.

When the safety of the child is considered, morally and physically, before marriage by legal enactments and less left to the kindness of the stork, a great deal will have been accomplished toward abolishing the divorce. Girls should be trained to be mothers. It is no greater privilege to be a mother than a father. As the sentiment now exists the mother is supreme. There should be no supremacy. Fatherhood should be regarded as sacredly as motherhood. Many abuses arise from the misconception that the mother is all in all to the child's welfare.

Easy access to a license and a preacher should be done away with; marriage should be made difficult. Good condition of health should be primarily a requirement. The education of a girl ought to be extended so that she would have no romantic notion of taking a blackleg into partnership in the future of her child. Likewise a man should know that a neuroathetic woman, addicted to all the imaginary ills of a patent medicine almanac, a headache powder fiend, or a "child mind," is not a fit subject to represent a continuation of his blood. Making marriage very, very difficult by cleanly requirements, publicity, education, and legislation tending solely toward the proper care, training and support of offspring, would, in one's opinion, have a salutary effect on the divorce evil.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 15 years of age.

(1) What can I do to prevent a turned complexion?

(2) I am a ballet dancer; have taken lessons since I was 12 years of age. Now I have danced at many different entertainments, and am considered a very good dancer. I have many beautiful costumes and would like to go on the stage and have a little fun, for I have had many good offers from stage managers; but my mother won't allow me to do such a thing. Do you think she is doing right?

(3) Here of late I have a lot of dandruff in my hair. How can I get that out?

(4) The boys and girls laugh at me and call me "mamma's baby." Do you think I ought to stop them doing this? I am the only child at home.

(5) What kind of shoes can I wear to match a light green coat?

ANXIOUS BALLET DANCER.

(1) Don't expose your skin to the sun or strong winds. Wear a wide brimmed hat, carry a sunshade, cover the skin wherever possible. At night bathe the skin with buttermilk and let it stay on till morning, then wash off with warm water and a mild soap.

(2) You are pretty young to go on the stage, and I'm afraid you would not think it so much fun if you could go. Stage people have to work hard to earn their money. Perhaps when you are a little older and better able to take care of yourself your mother may consent to your dancing on the stage. It is a good profession if you will become a really high class dancer.

(3) A little alcohol rubbed in the scalp every day will stop dandruff. Give the hair an egg shampoo about every three weeks.

(4) Don't bother with them. Do what you know is best. You love your mamma better than the others, don't you?

(5) Tan or black.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will cocoa butter make the face fat? I am awfully thin. Have a good appetite and am in perfect health. What can I do to make my face fuller?

(2) Will alcohol hurt the hair? Is it good for dandruff?

(3) Do you think I will grow any more. I soon will be 18.

(4) Mrs. Thompson, do you think they will ever pass that law that a girl can't work for less than $4 a week? Am making very little. I don't know what I would do if I didn't have a good home.

FRIEND.

(1) Nothing will make the face fat without making the whole body fleshier. A gentle massage, with any good cold cream, will make a thin face look better. Get a cleansing cream and massage with this before going to bed at night; wipe all the cream off the face when through massaging.

(2) A little alcohol rubbed into the scalp daily is said to cure dandruff. Using it twice a week, however, ought to be enough if you keep the hair clean and well brushed with a clean stiff brush. Much alcohol would not be good for the hair.

(3) You may grow some yet. However, if you are tall you will probably grow out, not up.

(4) I think that in time all of the states will have a living minimum wage law for women. Six dollars a week is not enough for a girl to live on decently when she must support herself. It has been demonstrated that a girl cannot live decently on less than $9 a week.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

THE TABLE.

Fish Toast—Pick a cup or more, as desired, of salt codfish into bits and soak a few hours, have the toast made as desired; heat a cup of rich cream; add pepper and a little butter, pour over the toast; serve hot. If no cream is available use milk, and thicken it a little and use more butter.

Burnt Walnut Bisque—Two cups of scalded milk, yolks of three eggs, one cup of sugar, two-thirds cup of chopped walnut meats, one cup of heavy cream, three-quarters tablespoonful of vanilla, few grains of salt. Make a custard of milk, eggs, one-third of the sugar, and salt. Caramelize the remaining sugar, add nut meats and turn into a slightly buttered pan. Cool, pound and pass through a puree strainer. Add to the custard, cool, then add one cup of heavy cream, beaten until stiff, and vanilla. Freeze and mould.

Italian Meringue—One-half cup of sugar, one-quarter cup of water, one tablespoonful of gelatin or one-quarter teaspoonful of granulated gelatin, whites of three eggs, one cup of thin cream, one-half tablespoonful of vanilla. Make a syrup of boiling sugar and water, pour slowly on the beaten whites of the eggs and continue beating. Place in a pan of ice water and beat until cold; dissolve the gelatin in small quantity of boiling water; strain into the mixture, whip the cream, fold in the whip and flavor.

Strawberry Dainty—Line a glass dish with alternate layers of macaroons and sugared strawberries. Make a custard of the yolks of three eggs, fourth of a cupful of sugar and one and one-half cupfuls of milk. Cool and pour over the berries in the dish. Whip the whites of the eggs very stiff, put in a buttered pudding dish, cover and cook over hot water for twenty minutes. When cold, turn out on top of the custard in the dish and sprinkle with powdered macaroons.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A few drops of oil of lavender scattered on the shelves in the library will dissipate the odor of mold which frequently arises from damp weather. Stockings should not be washed in the same water which has been used in washing white clothes, as they are apt in that case to become covered with lint.

The Caterpillar

A GORGEOUS black and gold caterpillar once started out for a stroll. Hardly had he gone a foot when he met a snail. "Good morning, Friend Caterpillar," said the snail pleasantly, "where are you going today?" "I'm just going for a little outing," replied the caterpillar. "I got so very tired of that plain green grass back there."

"I'm not surprised that you did," said the snail, "such a handsome caterpillar as you are, shouldn't have to spend his life down in the grass. You ought to climb up higher and live near the flowers."

"Dear me, how wise you are, Friend Snail," said the caterpillar, proudly bumping up his black and yellow back. "I never guessed you had so much wisdom in your shell. I was just thinking myself that I was living too modestly."

"Indeed you are," the snail repeated. The caterpillar felt so important and so flattered and comfortable withal, that he began looking at once for some place to climb.

Just then a butterfly came by. "Oh, Friend Butterfly," called the caterpillar, "I'm looking for a new place to live. Now you fly around and see the world—please tell me if this stem I am on, leads to a good home."

"Well, it's this way," said the butterfly, stopping close by to explain, "you are on the stem of a golden rod plant. The blossom is very beautiful and everyone stops to admire it, but—"

"That's just where I will live, then," interrupted the caterpillar, "for as handsome a person as I am should live in a beautiful home."

"But, you see, it won't be very safe up there," said the butterfly for the birds can see you much easier when you are up out of the grass and you may be eaten up."

"Never fear," said the caterpillar, importantly, do you suppose any bird would dare eat me—a beautiful caterpillar with a black and gold stripe?" So he turned his back on the butterfly

"Such a handsome caterpillar as you are, shouldn't have to spend his life down in the grass."

"Haden't you better keep down under that leaf, so that the birds won't see you?" asked a big blue fly, going by. "No, indeed, I'm not afraid of birds," said the caterpillar, "no bird would touch a big handsome caterpillar like me!"

And to show he wasn't afraid, he stretched himself out on the top of a big green leaf. Just then two robins flew by. "Excuse me a minute," said one as he spied the caterpillar, "I see my dinner waiting for me."

Down he darted and gobbled up the vain yellow caterpillar all in one bite, just as if he was a common every-day worm!
